

ABSTRACT

Data are received that represents current prices of options on a given asset.

An estimate is derived from the data of a corresponding implied probability distribution of the price of the asset at a future time.

- 5 Information about the probability distribution is made available within a time frame that is useful to investors, for example, promptly after the current option price information becomes available.

20092818